ABOUT SEMINAR:

The seminar titled "From Policy to Practice: The Role of Governance in Sustainable Development at the household level" will examine the complex relationship between governance and sustainable development in an area. To investigate the impact of governance on sustainable development indicators at the household level, identify governance weaknesses, and provide policy alternatives for change. The conference will go over governance and service delivery methods at the regional and household levels to determine how well government services satisfy local requirements. The seminar intends to draw attention to differences in governance effectiveness, public service accessibility, and sustainable development results across various socioeconomic and environmental contexts by concentrating on developed and underdeveloped countries. This seminar contributes to the goals of Vision Viksit Bharat@2047, which seek to encourage equitable, inclusive, and long-term growth through enhanced governance. In addition, the seminar will look at how strong governance may help with economic resilience, environmental sustainability, and social fairness, all of which are important aspects of the Viksit Bharat vision.
