Course Outcomes:

By the end of the course, the students will be able to develop a “sociological imagination”—the ability to connect personal experiences to larger social structures and historical forces. In addition, they are expected to define and explain fundamental social units, including social groups, institutions (family, religion, education), culture, and social stratification. The application of these concepts will, in turn, provide them with the opportunity to connect local and global contexts to understand the specific complexities of any society. the students learn to apply the sociological perspective in understanding how the society shapes individual lives.

Course Outcome:

This course will enable the students to view India not just as a geographical entity, but as a diverse, multi-layered social construct shaped by unique historical and cultural forces. The course lays the foundation of deconstructing the Indian social institutions by critically examining the foundational units of Indian society – such as the caste system, tribes, joint family, and village community – and how they have evolved from tradition to modernity. The course, supported by an interdisciplinary approach, facilitates learning and reflecting about the multiple – and contextual – socio-cultural registers of Indian society.

INTRODUCING SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY

Paper Code – SOCDSC303T

Course Objective:

Offering a foundational understanding of how different frameworks interpret and explain social life the course maps the diverse theoretical traditions that constitute Sociological theory. It familiarizes students with key approaches such as functionalism, conflict theory, interactionism, and feminist thought, along with their intellectual roots. Engaging with these frameworks, the course enables students to move between different ways of seeing the social, cultivating a more attentive and critical sensibility toward the discipline of Sociology.

Course Outline:

1. Plurality of Sociological Perspective (10hrs.)

2. Functionalism (20hrs.)

2.1 Intellectual roots: Auguste Comte, Emile Durkheim (basic idea)

2.2 Analytical Functionalism: Talcott Parsons

2.3 Empirical Functionalism: Robert K. Merton

3. Conflict Perspective (10hrs.)

3.1 Intellectual roots: Karl Marx and Max Weber (basic idea)

2.1 Ralf Dahrendorf

2.2 Georg Simmel and Lewis Coser

3. Interactionism (10hrs.)

3.1 G. H. Mead

3.2 Herbert Blumer

3.3 Erving Goffman

4. Feminist Perspective (10hrs.)

4.1 Liberal feminism

4.2 Radical feminism

4.3 Marxist feminism

Course Outcome:

The central outcome is for students to understand how “the social” is scientifically conceptualized and how these abstract ideas explain real-world interactions. This course introduces the students to the relationship between theory and perspectives. In addition, it provides a foundation for sociological theories that are a part of papers in the subsequent semesters. This paper enables the students to develop critical thinking skills and help them to learn how to read, interpret and critique original works of various thinkers.

POLITICS AND SOCIETY
Paper Code – SOCDSC405T

Course Objective:

This course attempts to introduce the students to the sociological dimensions of politics. Attending to the dispersed and everyday nature of power, it introduces the students to the ideas such as political culture and socialization, elite, ruling class and political parties as the sites through which individuals come to inhabit the 'political'.

Course Outline:

1. Political Culture and Political Socialization(20 hrs.)

1.1 Meaning and Dimensions of Political Culture

1.2 Meaning and types of Political Socialization

1.3 Agencies of Political Socialization and their role

2.1 Power and Authority

2.2 Elites and the Ruling Classes

3. Political Parties, Pressure Groups, and Local Structures of Power(20 hrs.)

3.1 Political Parties: Structure and Functions

3.2 Local Governance: Panchayat System

Course Outcome:

This course aims to bridge the gap between social structures and political systems. It is basically designed to help students to understand how power operates within a social context. By the end of the course, the students will be able to understand and appreciate the diversity of ways in which politics operates historically and spatially to generate a more expansive notion of the realm of the political. This course will also help the learners develop the ability to comprehend the embeddedness of political and social in each other.

GENDER AND SOCIETY Paper Code – SOCDSC406T

Course Objective:

The course examines gender as a dynamic social construct rather than a fixed trait, shaped by institutions, norms, and everyday practices. It covers core concepts like patriarchy, masculinity, and femininity, focusing on how these categories create social hierarchies that impact labour and the body. Also, viewing gender as a space for resistance and negotiation, the course highlights the potential for social transformation.

Course Outline:

1. Gender as a Social Construct(15hrs.)

- 1.1. Gender, Sex, Sexuality
- 1.2. Construction of Masculinity and Femininity

2. Understanding Patriarchy (15 hrs.)

- 2.1 What is Patriarchy; Sexism; Androcentrism
- 2.2 Public-Private Dichotomy

3. Differences and Inequalities (15 hrs.)

- 3.1 Gendered Division of Labour
- 3.2 Gender and Disability

Course Outcome:

This course aims to challenge common-sense notions of gender by providing a scientific and critical framework. By the end of the course, the learners are expected to have a transformed understanding social identity and structural inequality. Additionally, the learners will also develop an understanding of concepts such as sex and gender by problematizing commonsensical notions of gender. Learners gain a professional vocabulary including terms like patriarchy, gender stereotypes, hegemonic masculinity, and heteronormativity. They will be able to identify and compare various schools of feminist thought, such as Liberal, Marxist, Radical and Socialist feminism.

Course Outcome:

The paper focusses on the development of the discipline within India and the unique perspectives of its pioneering thinkers. Students learn about the emergence of sociology in India and the social, political, and intellectual contexts that shaped its growth as a distinct academic field. By the end of the course, learners will be able to analyze the works of key figures like G.S. Ghurye, D.P. Mukherji, Benoy Kumar Sarkar and Radhakamal Mukherjee. The course equips students to engage with contemporary debates using established sociological theories. Learners can evaluate the role of tradition and the impact of modernization on Indian social structures through the lens of indigenous frameworks.

SOCIAL STRATIFICATION Paper Code – SOCDSC508T

Course Objective:

This course explores social stratification not just as a set of statistics, but as a lived experience that shapes habits, perceptions, and personal opportunities. By examining competing theories—from economic and functionalist views to intersecting power dynamics—it encourages students to analyze their own position within these hierarchies. The course treats inequality as an intimate, evolving force that can be both understood and questioned.

Course Outline:

1. Introducing Social Stratification: Forms and Consequences (5 hrs.)

2. Social Mobility: Concept and Types(5 hrs.)

2. Theories of Stratification (20 hrs.)

2.1. Marx: Class

2.2. Functionalism: Kingsley Davis and Wilbert E. Moore, Tumin's Critique

2.3. Max Weber: Class, Status and Power

3. Identities and Inequalities(15hrs.)

3.1. Caste and Ethnicity

4. Gender Stratification(15 hrs.)

4.1 Gender and Caste

4.2 Gender and Disability

Course Outcome:

This course aims to provide students with a deep understanding of how societies are organized into hierarchical layers. By the end of the course, learners will be able to distinguish between difference, inequality, and hierarchy, and comprehend stratification as a structural feature of the society. They will be able to examine the forms of stratification, understand the relevance of caste, race, and ethnic identities in the contemporary world. Students will also learn to critically evaluate major sociological theories, including functionalism and conflict theory. The learners will develop the ability to analyze how multiple axes of identity - such as caste, class, gender, race, and disability – intersect to produce complex layers of advantage and disadvantage.

SOCIOLOGY OF RELIGION

Paper Code – SOCDSC509T

Course Objective:

This course examines religion as a social force that structures everyday life and meaning. By exploring various theoretical frameworks, students will analyze how religion is 'sociologized' while acknowledging the limitations of each perspective. The curriculum also addresses contemporary transformations, looking at how religious boundaries are currently being reshaped—sometimes becoming more rigid and exclusionary, and at other times more fluid and individualized—due to global social and political shifts.

लक्ष्यं विश्वमानम्

Course Outline:

1. Approaches to the Study of Religion (35 hrs.)

- 1.1 Formulating Religion
- 1.2 Emile Durkheim: Society as Sacred
- 1.3 Karl Marx: Religion as Alienation
- 1.4 Max Weber: Religion as 'Social Action'

2. Contemporary Directions in the Sociology of Religion (25 hrs.)

- 2.1 Religious Fundamentalism
- 2.2 The Secularization Debate
- 2.3 Religious Individualism and the Boundaries of Religion

Course Outcome:

This paper aims to provide students with a scientific and non-theological understanding of religion as a social institution. By the end of the course, learners will gain in-depth knowledge of classical theories, specifically Emile Durkheim's study of the sacred vs the profane, Max Weber's work on the Protestant Ethic, and Karl Marx's view of religion as the 'opium' of the people. Graduates will be able to define and analyze the core components of religious life, including rituals, myths, symbols, and beliefs. In addition, students also learn to analyze the intersection of religion with power, focussing on contemporary issues like communalism, secularism, and fundamentalism.

SOCIOLOGY OF KINSHIP

Paper Code – SOCDSC510T

Course Objective:

The course engages with kinship as a foundational domain of social organization, examining the principles through which relations of descent, alliance, and residence are structured and reproduced. It introduces students to key analytical categories, situating them within broader debates on family, marriage, and household as historically variable institutions. By attending to transformations brought about by migration, changing family forms, and new reproductive technologies and intimate practices, the course foregrounds kinship as a dynamic field—where normative frameworks are reworked and the boundaries of relatedness are continually redefined.

Phone : (033) 2524 1975 / 1976 / 1978 / 1979 Fax : (033) 2524 1977

Course Outline:

1. Introduction (20 hrs.)

1.1 Key Terms: Descent, Consanguinity, Filiations, Incest Taboo, Affinity, Family, Residence

2. Family, Household and Marriage (20 hrs.)

2.1 Meaning, Characteristics, and household dimensions of joint family – Disintegration Debate

2.2 Changing Structure and Functions of Marriage, Family and Household

2.3 Marriage and Migration: Factors Causing Marriage and Migration, Inter-regional Variations of Marriage Migration, Positive and Negative Aspects of Marriage Migration, Marriage Migration and Globalisation

3. Re-casting Family and Kinship (20 hrs.)

3.1 Debates around lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) and Live-in Relationships.

3.2 New Reproductive Technologies

Course Outcome:

The course aims to move beyond biological explanations to show how human relationships are culturally constructed and socially organized. This course will enable the students to grasp the historical evolution of kinship theories from a biological deterministic approach to a culture of relatedness. By the end of the course, learners will be able to comprehend the coexistence of multiple perspectives in the study of family, marriage, and kinship. Students will also be able to evaluate how technologies like IVF and surrogacy are 'recasting' traditional definitions of motherhood, fatherhood, and relatedness. They learn to examine the rise of nontraditional families, including single-parent households, cohabitation, and queer kinship networks.

SOCIAL RESEARCH METHODS - I

Paper Code – SOCDSC511T

Course Objective:

This course serves as an introduction to the methodologies of sociological research, guiding students through the essential tools and frameworks used to study society. Rather than just a 'how-to' guide, it dives into the philosophical underpinnings of social inquiry, exploring how our ontological and epistemological assumptions tend to shape the way we collect and interpret data.

Course Outline:

1. What is Sociological Research? (20 hrs.)

- 1.1 Objectivity and Reflexivity in Sociology
- 1.2 Theory and Research
- 1.3 Concepts and Hypothesis

2. Perspectives towards the study of social phenomenon (25 hrs.)

- 2.1 Reasoning: Deductive and Inductive
- 2.2 Methodologies of Social Research: Qualitative, Quantitative and Triangulation
- 2.3 Types of Research: Basic and Applied, Historical, Empirical, Descriptive, Exploratory, Comparative, Feminist

3. Modes of Enquiry (15 hrs.)

- 3.1 Field Research (Ethnography)
- 3.2 Survey Research

Course Outcome:

This is the foundational course designed to transit students from theoretical learning to empirical investigation. It focuses on the logic and philosophy behind how we “know” what we know about society. This course enables the students to develop the capability to evaluate the methodological validity of the claims made by theory. The course enables students to evaluate a piece of research and move towards designing a simple research project. Students will learn to identify ethical and practical issues in research. They also engage with the ideals of objectivity and reflexivity. This course enables the learners to comprehend that research methods are universal and not bound by cultural location.

INDIAN SOCIOLOGICAL THOUGHT - II

Paper Code – SOCDSC612T

Course Objective:

This course introduces the students with some of the important philosophical understanding of the nature of Indian society. Attempts are made to acquaint them with the different intellectual opinion regarding the appropriate course of nation building in a diverse society like India. It also intends to introduce the students with some of the celebrated Indian sociologists and social anthropologists whose theoretical and empirical insights regarding the structural configuration of Indian society significantly inform the debates about the processes of national development in a significant manner.

Course Outline:

1. Rabindranath Tagore: Rural Reconstruction (10hrs.)
2. M. K. Gandhi: Model of Rural Development (5hrs.)
3. B. R. Ambedkar: Annihilation of Caste (10hrs.)
4. Verrier Elwin: Tribes in India (10hrs.)
5. M.N. Srinivas: Social Change (10hrs.)
6. Irawati Karve: Gender and Kinship (10hrs.)
7. Leela Dube: Caste and Gender (5hrs.)

Course Outcome:

This course is designed to advance a student's understanding of the complexities of Indian society through specific theoretical lenses and historical processes. By the end of the course,

Course Outcome:

This course focusses on the transition from understanding general concepts to the practical application of quantitative and qualitative research. Students here learn to move beyond theory to create a structured research design, including defining problems, formulating hypothesis, and selecting appropriate methodologies. Learners gain proficiency in statistical tools and techniques, such as measures of central tendency and dispersion. Since the thrust of the course is on empirical reasoning, students learn to differentiate between qualitative and quantitative aspects of research in terms of collection and subsequent analysis of data. By imparting the knowledge of theory and praxis of research, students are trained to arrive at a critical understanding of the course which equips them with necessary skills for employment in any social research organization.

- 1.1 Materialist Conception of History
- 1.2 Capitalist Mode of Production

2. Emile Durkheim (20 hrs.)

- 2.1 Individual and Society
- 2.2 Division of Labour

3. Max Weber (20 hrs.)

- 3.1 Social Action and Ideal Types
- 3.2 Religion and Economy

Course Outcome:

This course provides the essential foundation of the discipline by introducing the works of classical sociologists. Learners will be able to grasp the ‘grand foundational themes’ of sociology and the historical conditions (such as Industrial Revolution and Enlightenment) that led to its emergence as a distinct discipline. By the end of the course, the students will be able to outline the key concepts and theoretical elements of the seminal thinkers like Karl Marx, Emile Durkheim, and Max Weber, and learn to apply these classical theories to their own everyday life experiences and contemporary social issues. They will be able to move beyond commonsense explanations to think about social situations theoretically.

WRITING ACADEMIC PAPERS /RESEARCH PROPOSALS

Paper Code – SOCDSC615T

Course Objective:

This course attempts to introduce students to academic writing. These goes further in enhancing the students' competence in using academic writing styles and acquaint them with the theoretical as well as pragmatic craft of developing a research proposal and writing research/academic papers and also to a specialized terminology of style and organization.

Course Outline:

1. Introduction to Academic Writing (10 hrs.)

- 1.1 Understanding Academic Writing Conventions - The purpose of Academic writing
- 1.2 Differentiating between academic and non-academic writing: Features of Academic writing
- 1.3 Forms of academic writing

2. Source Management and Critical Thinking (20 hrs.)

- 2.1 Literature Review – Synthesizing existing knowledge
- 2.2 Using library resources and online databases
 - 2.2.1 Academic texts; types of texts
 - 2.2.2 Using reading lists
 - 2.2.3 Using library catalogues
 - 2.2.4 Using library websites to search electronic resources
- 2.3 Techniques of Critical Reading
 - 2.2.1 Reading methods – Titles, Subtitles and Text features
 - 2.2.2 Reading Abstracts – Facts and Opinions
 - 2.2.3 Assessing Internet Sources Critically

3. Writing: Developing Critical Approaches (15 hrs.)

- 3.1 Writing Proposal, Paper, Essay and Dissertation – Planning, Outlining, Drafting, Revising and Editing

3.2 References and Quotations

- 3.2.1 Use of References
- 3.2.2 Citations and References
- 3.2.3 Use of Quotations
- 3.2.4 Organizing the list of References

4. Avoiding Plagiarism (15 hrs.)

- 4.1 Concept of Plagiarism
- 4.2 Types of Plagiarism
- 4.3 Preventing Plagiarism
- 4.4 Correcting Plagiarism
- 4.5 Plagiarism Detection Tools

Course Outcome:

This course aims to bridge the gap between theoretical knowledge and professional scholarly output. The learners will be able to develop the ability to identify researchable gaps and construct clear, concise, and manageable research questions. They will learn to draft a comprehensive research proposal including key sections like the title, abstract, introduction, methodology and the timeline. They will also master the skill of searching, synthesizing and critically analyzing existing scholarly work to justify a new study. In addition, they will also gain proficiency in formal writing techniques including logical structuring of arguments, paragraph unity, and clear expression.

ECONOMIC SOCIOLOGY

Paper Code – SOCDSC716T

Course Objective

Engaging with the entanglement of economic life and social relations, the course explores how production, exchange, and distribution are shaped by norms, values, and forms of organizations that exceed formal economic reasoning. It introduces students to different ways of understanding economic processes, from reciprocity and gift to market exchange and monetization, situating them within broader socio-cultural contexts.

Course Outline:

1. Perspectives in Economic Sociology (15 hrs.)

- 1.1 Formalism and Substantivism
- 1.2 Reciprocity and Gift

2. Forms of Exchange (10 hrs.)

- 2.1 Exchange and Money

3. Systems of Production(30 hrs.)

- 3.1 Hunting and Gathering
- 3.2 Peasant
- 3.3 Capitalism
- 3.4 Socialism (Basic Concept)

4. Globalization (5 hrs.)

4.1 Positive and Negative effects of Globalizing Processes

Course Outcome:

This course explores how social forces, networks, and cultural norms shape economic activities such as production, consumption, and exchange. Rather than viewing markets as purely rational, the course examines them as social systems embedded within society. The students will develop familiarity with different theoretical and conceptual aspects of economic sociology as a specialized branch of knowledge. They are also expected to acquire a background knowledge about the diverse ways in which economy is interlinked with other aspects of society and culture. By the end of the course, the learners will be able to analyze the social impact of contemporary economic processes, including globalization, the informal economy, and the changing nature of work and consumption.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Paper Code – SOCDSC717T

Course Objective:

At stake in this course is not merely the enumeration of “social problems,” but an inquiry into the conditions under which certain forms of suffering, disruption, or deviance come to be recognized as socially significant. It engages with different conceptual and theoretical orientations to examine how such problems are constituted at the intersection of structural arrangements, normative expectations, and lived experiences.

Course Outline:

1. Concepts and Approaches (20 hrs.)

Functional, Marxist and Gandhian Approaches to the study of Social Problem
Characteristics and Types of Social Problems
Systemic Factors Leading to Social Problems
Societal Response to Social Problems

2. Theories (20 hrs.)

2.1 Deviance
2.2 Differential Association
2.3 Labelling Theory

3.1 Unemployment

3.2 Corruption

3.3 Child Labour

Course Outcome:

The paper is designed to move students beyond “common-sense” knowledge to a rigorous, scientific understanding of societal challenges. Students will be able to apply various sociological theories to understand the causes and consequences of social problems. Students will define and analyze major social problems such as crime, delinquency, corruption, and unemployment in contemporary Indian society.

SOCIOLOGICAL THINKERS - II

Paper Code – SOCDSC818T

Course Objective:

The course engages with a set of theoretical formulations that seek to make sense of action, self, and social reality within Sociological theory. It follows how the individual is understood not in isolation, but as constituted through systems, interactions, performances, and shared constructions of meaning. Bringing these perspectives into conversation, the course draws attention to the varied ways in which social order is maintained, experienced, and questioned, enabling students to move between different levels of analysis while remaining attentive to the tensions and possibilities within each framework.

Course Outline:

1. Talcott Parsons (12 hrs.)

1.1 Action Systems

2. G. H. Mead (12 hrs.)

2.1 Interactional Self

3. Erving Goffman (12 hrs.)

3.1 Dramaturgy

4. Peter L. Berger and Thomas Luckmann (12 hrs.)

4.1 Social Construction of Reality

5. Herbert Marcuse (12 hrs.)

5.1. Critical Social Theory

Course Outcome:

This course typically refers to an advanced university course that shifts focus from classical founders like Marx and Durkheim to structural functionalists, social constructionists, and critical theorists. This course will help the students in developing an understanding of the characteristics and dynamics of the social world, and thereby will be able to comprehend how the postclassical sociologists attempt to understand the social world. They will be able to appreciate the relevance and limits of the contemporary theories or theoretical approaches to make sense of social reality. The learners will be able to grasp the basic methodological stances of the thinkers, through some original texts and their role in building sociological knowledge.

SOCIOLOGY OF SOCIAL MOVEMENTS

Paper Code – SOCDSC819T

Course Objectives:

The course engages with collective action as a mode through which groups articulate grievances, assert identities, and seek to transform existing social arrangements. It introduces students to the conceptual contours of social movements, attending to their varied forms, trajectories, and internal dynamics. By situating movements within the Indian context, the course draws attention to how struggles around class, caste, tribe, and gender emerge from specific historical conditions. This enables the students see social movements both as responses to inequality and sites of reimagining the ‘social’.

- 1.1 An outline of Social Movement
- 1.2 Types of Social Movement

2.Social Movements in India (40 hrs.)

- 2.1 Peasant Movement
- 2.2 Working Class Movement
- 2.3 Tribal Movement
- 2.4 Caste based Movement
- 2.5 Gender based Movement

Course Outcome:

This course focusses on how collective action shapes and transforms society. This will enable the students to use the sociological concepts to identify and distinguish social movements from other collective actions like protests, revolts, or mob behaviour. The learners will be able to develop the ability to visualize the connection between human agency and structural change. They will be able to explain the transition from traditional, class-based 'old' movements (like labour movements) to contemporary 'new' social movements focused on identity, culture, and lifestyle (like LGBTQ+ or environmentalism).

POPULATION STUDIES

Paper Code – SOCDSC820T

Course Objectives:

Attending to the intricate relationships between demographic processes and the socio-cultural worlds the course engages with the study of population. Alongside the theoretical formulations that seek to explain patterns of population change it introduces students to the key processes of fertility, mortality, and migration. Situating these processes within comparative policy contexts, the course enables students to understand variations in population composition and growth across societies. and how these differences are tied to broader questions of development and social transformation.

Course Outline:

Course Outcome:

This course is designed to provide a critical understanding of the interface between population and society. The learners will be able to identify and define key demographic concepts, including fertility, mortality, and migration, and their role in shaping population size, composition, and structure. They will also be able to contrast and apply major population theories such as Malthusian theory, Demographic Transition theory, and Optimum Population theory to historical and contemporary scenarios. By the end of this course, the students acquire the ability to analyze the evolution of population policies and understand how population dynamics act as both constraints and resources for sustainable development.

SOCIOLOGY OF ENVIRONMENT

Paper Code – SOCDSC821T

Course Objective:

At the intersection of nature and society, the course examines how environmental questions emerge, are understood, and contested within social life. It engages with some of the key debates and approaches the subject, showing how questions of risk, knowledge, and development are framed, interpreted, and lived in different ways across social contexts. Focusing on environmental movements, particularly in the Indian context, it highlights how ecological concerns become grounds for collective action, where struggles over resources, livelihoods, and modes of living take shape.

Course Outline:

1. Envisioning Environmental Sociology (15 hrs.)

- 1.1. What is Environmental Sociology?
- 1.2. Realist Constructionist Debate.

BASIC CONCEPTS OF SOCIOLOGY

PAPER CODE – SOCMIN101T

Course Objective:

The course introduces students to the foundational language and conceptual repertoire of sociology, enabling them to grasp how the social world is organized, interpreted, and lived. It familiarizes them with core concepts and categories through which social relations, institutions, and processes are understood, while situating sociology in relation to allied disciplines.

Course Outline:

1. Sociology: The Discipline (15 hrs)

1.1 Definition and Scope

1.2 Relationship with Anthropology and History

2. Basic Concepts (45 hrs)

2.1 Society; social interaction; community; association; institution; culture; cultural lag; social structure; social system; social action; status and role; role conflict; role set; norms and values; folkways and mores; conformity and deviance; law and customs;

2.2 Socialization: Concept; Processes and Agencies, nature-nurture debate

2.3 Social Processes: Integrative and Disintegrative

2.4 Social Control: Types and Agencies

2.5. Social Groups: Concept, Types

2.6 Social Stratification: Concept; Forms, Social Mobility

Course Outcome:

This course provides the foundational building blocks for understanding social reality through a scientific lens. By the end of the course, the students are expected to develop a Sociological Perspective and thus distinguish between 'common sense' observations and rigorous sociological reasoning. Students learn to use the sociological imagination to see how individual lives are shaped by broader social structures.

INTRODUCING INDIAN SOCIETY PAPER CODE – SOCMIN202T

Course Objective:

Beginning with the question of unity and diversity, the course explores the complexity of Indian society as it unfolds through everyday institutions and lived practices. It engages with structures such as caste, family, and village, attending to how they organize social relations, sustain hierarchies, and become sites of change. Situating these within contemporary issues and movements, the course attempts to aware students about the ongoing struggles and negotiations.

Course Outline:

1. India: Unity and Diversity (10 hrs.)

2. Basic Social Institutions (25 hrs.)

2.1 Caste: Concept, features, and critique

2.2 Family: Traditional Joint Family and its disintegration debate

2.3. Village: Village solidarity, Agrarian Class structure

3. Contemporary social issues and mobilizations (25 hrs.)

3.1 Farmers' movement

3.2 Dalit movement

3.3 Women's movement

Course Outcome:

This course is designed to transition students from a general understanding of sociology to a specialized analysis of the Indian social context. By the end of this course, students are expected to apply a sociological lens to India and move beyond 'text-view' or scriptural knowledge to a 'field-view' or empirical reality of Indian society. Students learn to view images and ideas of India through a critical, scientific framework.

INTRODUCING SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY

PAPER CODE – SOCMIN303T

Course Objective:

The course orients students to the diverse ways in which the social has been theorized, opening up a field of thought where multiple explanations coexist, overlap, and contend. It draws attention to how different theoretical standpoints frame questions of order, conflict, meaning, and power, each offering a distinct way of making sense of social life. By moving across these ways of seeing, the course enables students to engage with theory as a mode of thinking rather than a fixed body of knowledge, cultivating an ability to hold together differences and tensions in understanding the social world.

Course Outline:

1. Plurality of Sociological Perspective (10hrs.)

2. Functionalism (20hrs.)

2.1 Analytical Functionalism: Talcott Parsons

2.3 Empirical Functionalism: Robert K. Merton

3. Conflict Perspective (10hrs.)

3.1 Ralf Dahrendorf

3.2. Lewis Coser

3. Interactionism (10hrs.)

3.1 G.H. Mead

3.2 Herbert Blumer

4. Feminist Perspective (10hrs)

Course Outcome:

This course is designed to bridge the gap between basic social concepts and the deep analytical frameworks that define the discipline. The learners will be able to apply the sociological ideas of the thinkers to their understanding of everyday experiences and use the sociological imagination to link private troubles to broader public issues.

GENDER AND SOCIETY PAPER CODE – SOCMIN404T

Course Objective:

Beginning with the question of how gender comes to be made and lived, the course examines the processes through which identities, roles, and differences are constituted within social relations. It reveals to the students how distinctions around masculinity, femininity, and sexuality are organized into patterns of inequality across varied contexts. Set against these formations, moments of resistance open up gender as a site of contestation, where established meanings are challenged and the terms of social life are continually reworked.

Course Outline:

1. Gender as a Social Construct(30hrs.)

1.1. Gender, Sex, Sexuality

1.2. Construction of Masculinity and Femininity

2. Differences and Inequalities (20 hrs.)

2.1 Gender and Class

2.2 Gender and Caste

3. Resistance and Movements(10 hrs.)

3.1 Women's Movement in India

Course Outcome:

This course introduces gender as a critical sociological lens for examining power, identity, and social institutions. The learners will be able to apply intersectionality and analyze how gender intersects with other identities such as caste, class, race, religion, and ethnicity to produce unique experiences of privilege or marginalisation.

SOCIAL STRATIFICATION PAPER CODE – SOCMIN505T

Course Objective:

The course opens with discussion on stratification as a patterned ordering of social life, where differences are organized into enduring hierarchies. It attends to how such arrangements take shape, how they are sustained, and how they come to be experienced in everyday contexts. Through varied theoretical reflections, the course offers ways of understanding the principles that underlie these inequalities, while drawing attention to their differentiated effects.

Course Outline:

1. Introducing Social Stratification: Forms and Consequences (10 hrs.)

2. Social Mobility: Concept and Types(5 hrs.)

3. Theories of Stratification (30 hrs.)

3.1. Karl Marx: Class

3.2. Functionalism: Kingsley Davis and Wilbert E. Moore, Tumin's Critique

3.3. Max Weber: Class, Status and Power

4. Feminism and Gendered Stratification (15 hrs.)

Course Outcome:

This course focuses on the systematic study of structured social inequalities and how they are reproduced across generations. Upon successful completion of the course, students would be able to define and categorize inequality and distinguish between 'natural' inequalities and socially constructed ones. Students will be able to grasp the four primary elements of any stratification system: differentiation, ranking, evaluation, and rewarding.

SOCIAL RESEARCH METHODS

PAPER CODE – SOCMIN606T

Course Objective:

The course engages with the practice of sociological inquiry, following the movement from framing a question to the systematic collection of evidence. It introduces students to the different ways in which social research is designed, organized, and carried out across varied contexts. Attention is given to the choice of methods and the forms of data they generate, enabling students to understand how knowledge of the social is assembled, interpreted, and made meaningful through research.

Course Outline:

1. Social Research (35hrs.)

1.1 What is Sociological Research?

1.2. Steps of Social Research

1.3 Types of Research: Pure and Applied, Quantitative and Qualitative, Exploratory and Experimental

2. Methods of Data Collection (25hrs.)

2.1 Survey Methods: Sampling, Questionnaire, and Interview

2.2 Observation: Participant and non-participant

Course Outcome:

This course serves as the ‘toolbox’ of sociology. It transits students from studying social theories to actually conducting scientific investigations. Upon completion of the course, students are expected to formulate research designs. They will be able to identify and develop the components of a research project, including the Research Problem, Hypothesis, and Literature Review.

SOCIOLOGY OF WORK

PAPER CODE – SOCSMC701T

Course Objective:

The course engages with work as a central domain of social life, attending to its intricate relation with everyday existence, identity, and social organization. It examines how different forms and experiences of work are structured, including the ways in which labour is valued, estranged or rendered invisible. In doing so, it reflects on the transformations brought about by industrial modes of production, particularly the gradual separation of work from other spheres of life. By situating these shifts alongside questions of informality, risk, and vulnerability, the course exposes students to the subject of work as a site where broader social relations are both organized and unsettled.

Course Outline:

1. Interlinking Work and Industry

2. Dimensions of Work

2.1 Alienation

2.2 Gender

2.3 Unpaid Work and Forced Labour

3. Work in the Informal sector

4. Risk, Hazard, and Disaster

Course Outcome:

This course examines the social relations, institutions, and structures that surround the act of production. By the end of this course, students are expected to understand work as a social construct. The learners will be able to distinguish work from its purely economic definitions by identifying its social and cultural dimensions, including unpaid work, household labour, and 'gendered' work.

SOCIETY AND ENVIRONMENT

PAPER CODE – SOCSMC702T

Course Objective:

Situated at the interface of society and environment, the course examines how the natural world is apprehended, interpreted, and acted upon within social life. It foregrounds the tension between material realities and their social construction, opening up questions about how environmental knowledge is produced and contested. Engaging with different approaches, the course traces how ecological concerns become entangled with processes of development, gendered relations, and power, revealing this interface as a shifting terrain of meaning, practice, and conflict.

- 1.1. Society and Environment: The case of Environmental Sociology
- 1.2. Realist-Constructionist Debate.

2. Approaches

- 2.1 Ecological Modernization
- 2.2. Ecofeminism

3. Environmental Movements in India

- 3.1 Forest based movement – Chipko
- 3.2 Water based movement – Narmada

Course Outcome:

This course bridges the gap between natural ecology and social structures. The learners, at the end of the course, will be able to define the field of environmental sociology and apply social theories to nature. They will be able to identify how environmental hazards disproportionately affect marginalized groups based on caste, class, and gender.

DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIAL RESEARCH SKILLS

PAPER CODE – SOCHSE101M/SOCHSE202M/SOCHSE303M*

Course Objective:

This course aims to cultivate a foundational competence in social research by introducing students to the conceptual, methodological, and practical dimensions of inquiry. It seeks to develop an understanding of how social phenomena are translated into researchable problems, measured through appropriate techniques, and interpreted through both quantitative and qualitative approaches. Emphasis is placed on the logic of measurement, the distinctions between different types of data, and the critical use of numerical representations. By integrating conceptual clarity with basic analytical skills, the course enables students to engage with data not merely as information, but as a constructed and interpretable form of social knowledge.

Course Outline:

1. The Nature of Social Research:

- 1.1 The concepts of social research
- 1.2 Quantitative and qualitative social research
- 1.3 Mixed method

2. Using Series of Numbers to do social research

- 2.1 The levels of measurement
 - The Nominal level
 - The Ordinal level
 - The Interval level
 - The Ratio level
 - Relationship between the levels

GENDER SENSITIZATION

PAPER CODE – SOCHSE101M/SOCHSE202M/SOCHSE303M*

Course Objective:

This course seeks to develop a critical understanding of gender as a socially constructed and historically contingent category, shaped by relations of power and embedded in everyday life. It introduces key concepts and identities to examine how gendered norms, roles, and hierarchies are produced and sustained through institutions and practices. By engaging with issues of violence, inequality, and resistance, the course aims to sensitize students to the lived realities of marginalization while fostering an informed engagement with women's and LGBTQ movements in India. It further aims to cultivate a reflexive sensitivity toward everyday social rituals and practices, enabling students to critically discern the subtle ways in which gender is normalized and reproduced.

INTRODUCING SOCIOLOGY

PAPER CODE –

SOCHMD101M/SOCHMD201M/SOCHMD301M/SOCHMD401M/SOCHMD501M/SOCHMD601M*

Course Objective:

This course introduces the distinctiveness of sociology as a mode of understanding the social world. It seeks to move beyond common-sense explanations by cultivating a sociological sensibility toward everyday life, social institutions, and processes, enabling students to locate the 'social' within interactions often taken for granted as familiar, and to engage with them critically.

Course Outline:

1. What is Sociology?
2. Sociology and Common Sense
3. Know your society: Society and Social Institution, Community, Association, Folkways and Mores, Values and Norms, Social Groups: Primary and Secondary, In-group and Out-group
4. Social Processes: Assimilation, Accommodation, Cooperation, Competition and Conflict
